

Discover the Vicone High Performance Rubber Advantage

Partnering with Procurement to Deliver Value

If you're like most savvy industrial buyers, you realize there are several issues besides price that factor into the procurement decision. Product quality, on-time delivery, availability, and total cost of acquisition are all important aspects to consider. But you also need a supplier that can deliver unique solutions that address your most pressing challenges. A reliable partner you can trust that will do whatever it takes to help get your products to market cheaper and more efficiently.

The partnership advantage

When it comes to high performance rubber, the focus is on customized solutions, not volume. It's about profitability over commodity. To stay ahead in today's global marketplace you need the competitive advantage of a specialized partner like Vicone whose technical expertise and value-added services can make you more profitable by helping to cut costs, improve productivity and eliminate unnecessary activities. Services like inventory management, customized assembly, packaging, and labeling as well as cost reduction and purchase consolidation initiatives are just a few of the ways Vicone's customers are benefiting.

Vicone specializes in custom seals, extrusions, molded parts and fabricated gaskets. We take a consultative approach when looking at what rubber parts your company is using, and what applications you are using it for. We can then determine if there's anything we can do to streamline your operations and make your life easier.

We're the experts so you don't have to be

"Our customers turn to us for support because they recognize the value of our technical expertise and in-depth knowledge of rubber. We pride ourselves on being able to sit down with a customer, regardless of their industry or application, and either source or custom design the right part for their needs."

Eric Leclair, President
